Strong economic development results show Alabama is on right path

Alabama keeps building on its successful track record in economic development, and 2021's results underscore the impacts our efforts are making across the state. Last year, Alabama economic development projects generated commitments for over $7.7 billion in new capital investment — the second highest annual total in state history.

An impressive roster of new growth projects will reinforce the momentum we have built in the past five years. In fact, three of the four most fruitful years for new capital investment in Alabama have occurred since 2017. During this time frame, our economic development efforts have sparked the creation of over 65,000 jobs across the state.

The most recent successes are outlined in the latest installment of the New & Expanding Industry Report, which serves as an annual report card on the state's economic development performance. The new report sends a message that is loud and clear — economic growth in Alabama is accelerating at a rapid pace despite the obstacles raised by a global pandemic.

I once served as the assistant director of the Alabama Development Office (now known as the Alabama Department of Commerce), so I have a deep understanding of how important this work is to the future of our state. That's why economic development has been a top priority of my Administration since I first became Governor. The results spelled out in this report validate my confidence in our economic development strategies and add more fuel to my belief that we're definitely on the right path in Alabama.

Kay Ivey
Governor of Alabama

New growth projects will accelerate Alabama's economic growth

We may look back on 2021 as a pivotal year for Alabama's strategic economic development efforts, with high-impact growth projects creating great jobs in key industries and preparing a path for long-term economic expansion.

For the Alabama team, the year was filled with robust activity, resulting in 247 successful projects across a diverse lineup of industries ranging from metals manufacturing, food products, information technology, data centers, logistics, forestry and, of course, automotive and aerospace.

Overall, these new Alabama economic development projects are expected to bring in $7.7 billion in new capital investment, a figure that eclipses the previous year's total of $4.8 billion (in itself, a strong showing during the pandemic). The 2021 investment total stands as the second highest annual figure for Alabama's economic development team, trailing only the $8.7 billion recorded in 2018.

As outlined in our 2021 New & Expanding Industry Report, these projects will generate over 10,000 new direct jobs, both in metro areas and rural communities across the state.

In particular, activity in rural Alabama was strong during 2021, with projects involving $1.7 billion in new capital investment and almost 1,700 jobs landing in our "targeted" counties. Over the past two years, these rural counties have attracted $2.3 billion in new investment and over 3,600 jobs, and our team is committed to keeping that winning streak going path in Alabama.

Successes during the year include the recruitment of Landing, a technology-focused company creating a model for flexible apartment living, which relocated its headquarters from San Francisco to Birmingham, where it is creating over 800 jobs.

Another game-changer, also in Jefferson County, is J.M. Smucker Co.'s decision to invest $1.1 billion to open a new manufacturing/distribution hub in McCalla, which will have 750 jobs.

Other high-performing companies, including Facebook, Amazon and FedEx, also announced Alabama projects in 2021.

Meanwhile, Alabama continues to be an attractive destination for foreign direct investment (FDI), recording 44 projects from companies based in 11 different countries in 2021. These projects involve $1.1 billion in capital investment and over 1,700 jobs.

FDI remains a lifeblood for Alabama's economic growth, particularly in the automotive sector.

These results, along with a rich project pipeline, make me confident that our team will continue to deliver on Alabama's growth potential as we move through 2022 and beyond.
